Especially recommended for preschool through kindergartenersBy Midwest Book ReviewGrow Grow Grow is Jaenet Guggenheim's impressively paper collage illustrated presentation of an original poem by Barbara Riley. Through the seasons of a single year this story-poem follows a growing sunflower seed that meets the world of caterpillars, dogs, and weather with a compelling determination to grow. This artful and unique picturebook is especially recommended for preschool through kindergarteners and would make an ideal choice for bedtime bonding reading for parents and children.0 of 0 people found the following review helpful. colorful and engagingBy EricaMy children LOVE this book. The colorful collages really draw the eye in, and they work very well with the text. My older son received Grow Grow Grow as a gift when he was just over 2, and has been quoting it from day one-- "I have to GROW!!!" This book is wonderful for kids and adults alike. 0 of 0 people found the following review helpful. papers from around the world

The papers in the collage art come from all around the world! As a thank you, half of Jaenet's royalties are going to UNICEF. Each collage took at least a week of full work to make and is rich in color and detail -- of life in a garden.

About the Author
Barbara Riley lives in Houston, TX, with her husband and two sons. When she's not writing, she helps run an electronics company with her husband. She is currently at work on her third novel, a mystery set in Houston. Jaenet grew up drawing, dancing, and putting on puppet shows for/with her sisters. She wrote and illustrated her first book, Herman and Poppy Go Singing in the Hills, about a horse and a pony in the high desert plateau of New Mexico. Her next book was cut paper called Grow, Grow, Grow. Then she got her degree from the USC film school.
