Pat Featherstone : Grow to Live: A Simple Guide to Growing Your Own Good, Clean Food before purchasing it in order to gauge whether or not it would be worth my time, and all praised Grow to Live: A Simple Guide to Growing Your Own Good, Clean Food:

A celebration of the wonders of the natural world, this beautiful yet practical book is a simple guide for people in Southern Africa to grow their own food in whatever space is available, using methods that are tried and tested, simple, low-cost, water-wise, and resourceful. From classifying the different soils and tools that one needs in a successful garden, this guide also offers practical advice on maintaining and protecting an organic garden.

About the Author Pat Featherstone is a teacher and the director of a nonprofit organization, Soil for Life. Leah Hawker is a freelance photographer who focuses on botany, fashion, and beauty. Her fine-art body of work deals with gender issues and stereotyping through the photographic process, as well as mixed media.
